

Mentoring out of the limits June 3rd Shadowing Event at Camino Media

By Maureen Wan AD RM Planner

When General Manager of Asset Development Greta Lydecker attended high school in Pennsylvania, the energy industry did not conduct community outreach in her school. Thus, she gladly accepted the opportunity to welcome 16 high school girls to the Chevron Camino Media office on June 3rd. As juniors in the Independence High School Energy and Utility Academy, the students visited Chevron for a Job Shadowing Day with the Alliance of Women in Energy (AWE) mentors Amanda Beardsley, Heidi Hoffower, Marian Kramer, and Maureen Wan. Besides the warm welcome that Greta provided where she discussed the Chevron Way, the high school students also listened to presentations on Chevron, how a Geologist plans a horizontal well, what it like to visit the field, and careers in the petroleum industry. WN Site Leader Debbie Rodriguez

Introduced students to the Network and discussed her career at Chevron. After the lunch, groups of students followed AWE mentors to their work stations for job shadowing activities. After the day's events, the juniors left Chevron with strong impressions of our safety culture, the global nature of the energy business, terrific goodies of coffee mugs and light-up pens, and a better idea what it means to work in the "real world".
